DESC4.1: - some fantastic pictures.

DESC4.2: of Purdue University introduces a great example of the reactivity of Liquid Oxygen with Charcoal.

DESC4.3: This was brought to our attention by alert newspaper columnist Dave Barry.

DESC4.4: Need something to do this weekend? How about starting a BBQ with liquid oxygen? Check out the still photo on the left or, if you have the time, a 1.6MB MPEG MOVIE of lighting the grill with 3 gallons of liquid oxygen. They started with 60 lbs of charcoal, burning up 40 lbs of it in 3 seconds. Result is a grill ready to cook in about 3 seconds, and all the old grease (and the grill) burned off. Don't try this at home.

DESC4.5: A chemical engineer at Purdue University who dumps liquid oxygen on a lit grill. George has become Internet royalty because of this site.

DESC4.6: , whom I don't know from Adam, but who has a pretty cool page (fire!).

DESC4.7: How to light a BBQ fire in 3 seconds. Don't try this at home!

DESC10.2: Very Comprehensive Information

DESC10.3: of the NOAA Atlantic Oceanographic and Meteorological Laboratory has documented a decrease in the intensity of hurricanes, and the total number of hurricanes has also followed suit. The years 1991 through 1994 were extremely quiet in terms of the frequency of storms, hurricanes and strong hurricanes; even the unusually intense 1995 season was not enough to reverse this downward trend. It should be noted, too, that the number of typhoons in the northwestern Pacific appears to have gone up.
